'Best Mother's Day' for captive's mom

Reuters

CLEVELAND The mother of Gina DeJesus celebrated the "best Mother's Day" ever Sunday after her daughter was freed with three other captives last week from a long imprisonment in a Cleveland home.

DeJesus, 23, Amanda Berry, 27, and Berry's 6-year-old daughter were welcomed into their family homes last week after an escape and rescue May 6 from the dungeon-like house.

"This is the best Mother's Day I could ever have," said Nancy Ruiz when asked by a reporter last week how this year's celebration of motherhood would differ from those during the nine years her daughter was missing after she vanished while walking home from junior high school.

Mother's Day has a changed meaning for Berry, who during 10 years in captivity lost her mother and conceived and bore her own child, who DNA indicates was fathered by accused kidnapper Ariel Castro, police and prosecutors said.

There was no homecoming for the fourth captive, Michelle Knight, 32, the longest-held, who slipped into seclusion after being released from a hospital Friday. She shunned hospital visits from family members, some of whom believed she was a runaway when she disappeared 11 years ago after losing custody of her young son, her grandmother said.

The Cuyahoga County prosecutor is seeking murder charges, which could carry the death penalty, against Castro, 52, a former school bus driver who police said induced several miscarriages by beating and starving Knight.

Castro is being held on $8 million bail on charges he kidnapped and raped the three women while keeping them locked up in a rundown Cleveland home stocked with ropes and chains.

Brothers: We had no idea

Pedro and Onil Castro also initially arrested along with Ariel

CNN

When Ariel Castro was arrested last week on charges of kidnapping and raping three women for more than a decade in his Cleveland home, police also detained his two brothers, showing their mug shots to the world.

Police released Pedro and Onil Castro a few days later, saying neither man had anything to do with the alleged abductions and torture of Amanda Berry, Gina DeJesus and Michelle Knight.

The men, both in their 50s, are in hiding in an undisclosed location, as are other family members, including their 71-year-old mother. The brothers said their homes have had rocks thrown through the windows and they have been receiving death threats online.

In an exclusive interview with CNN, which took place outside Cleveland, the Castro brothers said they are grateful the three girls are finally free and safe, but they are haunted by missing clues and hunted by the media.

Unable to go home, they say they are trapped for something they didn't do. And they worry that people will always believe that they played a role.

"Absolutely," Onil Castro said.

"Yes," Pedro Castro said.

Their friends, they said, cannot fathom them doing anything like that.

"And the people out there that know me, they know that Onil Castro is not that person and has nothing to do with that. Would never even think of something like that," he said, referring to the allegations against his brother, Ariel.

"I was a very liked person, individual. I've never had any enemies. No reason for anybody to think that I would ever do something like that. It's a shock to all my friends. They couldn't believe it," Onil Castro said.

"Same," said Pedro Castro. "I couldn't never think of doing anything like that. If I knew that my brother was doing this ... I would not be, not—in a minute, I would call the cops because that ain't right.

"But yeah, it's going to haunt me down because people going to think, yeah, Pedro got something to do with this and Pedro don't have nothing to do with this. If I knew, I would have reported it, brother or no brother."

'Back to the Future' or modern reality?

Stephen Markley

redeye@tribune.com
@stephenmarkley

I've come up with a theory that almost undoubtedly will end with me winning a Nobel Prize. No big deal.

It strikes me that the terror, fear and general despondency of the world—the dystopian quality of the past decade or so—makes perfect sense in the context of the film

"Back to the Future: Part II."

For those not familiar with the crown jewel of the "Back to the Future" series, the second film finds Marty McFly traveling to the future with Doc Brown to put right an error his future self makes. In the course of doing so, Marty's nemesis, Biff, manages to deliver a copy of a sports almanac to his past self that allows him to predict the future and build an empire on gambling winnings. When Marty returns to his present day, he finds himself stuck in an alternate Biff-tainted reality.

That's what's happening right now. We are the unfortunate souls living in the Biff reality.

Think about it: The 2000 election debacle, 9/11, the Iraq war, the Bush presidency, Paris Hilton, economic stagnation followed by the near-collapse of the world economy, accelerating climate change, ocean acidification, firearms proliferation and the resulting killing spree, "Honey Boo Boo," unemployment, urban violence, Fox News and white male resentment as political ideology, the Afghanistan quagmire, the clash of civilizations predicted by Samuel Huntington accelerated by the globalization of communications that has created senseless killers out of disenchanted diasporadwellers like the Tsarnaev brothers, the Syrian civil war, Gwyneth Paltrow and her preposterously high fence—all of it makes sense only in the context of the Biff alternate reality.

Certainly, this is terrible. After all, I don't want to live in the Biff alternate reality. I want Biff washing my car while my hit science fiction novel plunders the best-seller list.

However, the good news is that all we have to do is find the so-called "Biff" of our time—the one absurdly successful individual who has revealed in wealth, fame and power even as the rest of the world has gone to crap in a hellbasket.

But who could it be? Professional billionaire buffoon Donald Trump? Some sleazy Wall Street kingpin like JPMorgan's Jamie Dimon? Rupert Murdoch? Beyoncé Knowles? My candidate would be someone who has profited from the laugh-out-loud absurdity of the horrors of the modern age, like Stephen Colbert.

Whatever the case, we need to find this person and destroy that sports almanac, ASAP.

Of course, I can hear people whining already, "But Markley, if we had civic institutions, a redoubtable media sector and an engaged citizenry, then we could safeguard our country—nay, the world!—from the encroachment of self-serving individuals who exploit blah blah blah ..."

Sure, we could do all that work. Or we could invent a time machine and travel back to the moment everything went off the rails and start flapping butterflies' wings and see how it all shakes out. Let's look for shortcuts, is what I'm saying.

Then again, maybe the Biff of our world is closer than you think. After all, I assume the Nobel Prize one wins for the Biff Theory comes with a cash prize and babes.

WATCH MEN

Working security at a club is no wild party

By Rachel Cromidas

REDEYE

Whatever you do, don't call them bouncers.

They're the people who keep Chicago's nightlife safe, screening the patrons who line up to enter clubs around the city, breaking up fights inside and, if you have too much to drink, making sure you make it into a cab at the end of the night.

But most of the men—and they are almost all men—who work as security guards and managers in the city's clubs think of themselves as conflict mediators first, not bar bouncers whose job it is to eject would-be troublemakers as quickly as possible.

"A bouncer is somebody who will grab somebody and throw them out, and you'll see their body bouncing," said Draper Hukan, the head of security at Bevy in River North. "That's not what we do at our club. It's a really aggressive name, it's for that guy who can bench-press 500 pounds and grab somebody with one arm."

Safety is always an issue for club operators. In March, a deadly shooting at the South Side nightclub Mr. G's Entertainment Center put clubgoers and managers on the alert.

Officials from Mr. G's did not respond to requests for comment on their safety protocol. Managers at other clubs around the city said they have layers of security in place to guard against a stabbing or a shooting, but they still struggle to walk the line between maximizing security and creating a friendly and fun environment for customers.

Hukan, 33, of Park Ridge, stresses that club safety needs to be subtle to be effective. "We have contingency plans for if there's a shooting or a fire, or mace in the building," he said.

Bevy has four to seven security guards in the club whenever it's open, for a ratio of one to every 50 patrons, Hukan said. If it needs to be evacuated, "We open up the exits as quickly as possible," he said. "We have ramps so you can run straight down and come out."

Hukan said Bevy sees one fight between patrons every two months on average, a relatively low rate.

Bevy guards wear suits, instead of the standard black T-shirts that are like a uniform for many nightlife workers, in part to send the message that they don't expect trouble. "We're not aggressive to the point where you can't come up to us and ask us something," he said. "We don't want to come off as attitude-ish."

Many clubs look for security guards who understand conflict resolution practices and know how to defuse a fight before it gets out of hand.

"You don't want to agitate the agitated, so you have to have some charisma and character and tact about what you do" to be a security guard, said Lo Grayson, a manager at the Shrine on South Wabash Avenue. "You're looking for someone who has a presence but also the ability to de-escalate the situation."

NIGHTTIME NO-NO'S

No matter how well your night is going, if you refuse a pat-down or can barely stand up straight, security at Chicago's clubs can keep you out. Some security guards told RedEye what raises red flags for them. &c.

Chris Fountain of Subterranean
HILARY HIGGINS/REDEYE PHOTOS

Lo Grayson of The Shrine

Though many club security guards are men, Grayson, 42, of Ravenswood, said he hires women as well because he believes they can more easily approach female patrons who are facing or causing trouble.

The Shrine's guards all go through an online training called Beverage Alcohol Sellers and Servers Education and Training, a course some Illinois bartenders are required to take. Grayson said it helps them do a better job spotting intoxicated visitors and dealing with them.

On a recent evening, Grayson was dressed in a black hoodie with a Shrine logo and cargo pants, and a clip-on microphone. Before the club opened for its weekly Tuesday night performance event, his duties included making sure the exits were lit, bathrooms were clean, sidewalk barriers and ropes were set up, and security personnel were accounted for.

"Tuesdays are pretty chill, he said. But on busier nights, door guards at the Shrine pat down visitors as they line up on Wabash Avenue. They check for weapons and screen people who have had too much to drink by looking at visitors' eyes and listening to how they answer the standard question, "When's your birthday?" Sometimes they deny large groups of people from the party buses that roll down the street on weekend nights if the revelers appear drunk.

"I think, because violence is at an all-time high here in Chicago," he said, "we're looking for anything that could cause harm."

Grayson said he trusts the pat-down protocol, but he knows it doesn't totally eliminate the possibility that attacks will take place immediately outside the club.

"Violence that takes place inside of clubs is because of a lack of search," he said. But "things that take place outside, you have very little control of. And it's random, it can happen anywhere at any time."

Chris Fountain, the security manager at Subterranean in West Town, said his first line of defense is the pat-down. Reports of violence at other clubs "scare me," Fountain said. But his No. 1 piece of advice for his security guards is to stay emotionally distant from a fight when they see one.

"I tell them, don't bring yourself into it. Try to break it up and separate both parties so that it doesn't come back to you and it doesn't come back to us," he said. "Some people think working in a nightclub is some kind of glorious thing where they can have fun and work at the same time ... but it's really like a 9-to-5. I want to go in and do the best job I can."

CHICAGO CLUB FIGHTS

Sometimes a night out can turn violent. RedEye rounded up some of the most talked-about club fights from the past year. R.C.

► Seven people were shot in March at Mr. G's Entertainment Center in Gresham after a fight broke out.

HEATHER CHARLES/TRIBUNE FILE

► Four people were shot during a private party at Ultra Lounge in Logan Square in December.

► A Chicago man was arrested in December and accused of stabbing a man in the neck with a broken beer bottle in the bathroom of Wrigleyville's Red Ivy sports bar.

► A man was shot multiple times in the groin outside a strip club on the Far South Side in October.

► A patron of V Live in Logan Square threw a drink at Drake while he was performing in June. "I wish you would point yourself out, I really do," Drake said. "I'd come down there and [bleep] you up myself."

► Four people were shot in April 2012 outside Supper Club Chicago in East Garfield Park, including one woman celebrating her 33rd birthday.

► Large groups of men with no women are more likely to be turned away, especially after midnight. Some security managers believe those groups are more likely to start fights.

► When they check your ID, they're not just checking your age. They want to hear you talk, and they want to look at your eyes to see if they're bloodshot.

► Don't try to sneak alcohol or drugs into the club. Depending on your age and the item, it could be illegal or at least against club rules, and lead to a confrontation out front.

► Leave your combs, pocket knives, "brass knuckle" purses and anything else that could be used as a weapon at home. If you're searched, you won't be allowed to bring them inside the club, and you could be denied entry outright.

Former mayor attends race that doubles as tribute to his late wife

Chicago Tribune

On a holiday celebrating families, former Mayor Richard M. Daley's tribute to his late wife inspired a pink-clad crowd running to raise awareness for breast cancer.

Thousands streamed into Grant Park on Sunday morning for the Komen Chicago Mother's Day Race for the Cure, an event that doubled as a celebration of breast cancer survivors and a somber remembrance of those like the ex-mayor's wife, Maggie Daley, who have died from the disease. Organizers dedicated the run to Chicago's former first lady, who died in 2011 at age 68, more than nine years after her diagnosis.

someone is affected by cancer, and they need their loved ones and their support,” Daley told WGN-TV. He also addressed the crowd early in the morning, organizers said, Steffens, herself a survivor, wore three bright-pink beaded necklaces, one for each year she has fought the disease.

Josefina Rojo of the Southeast Side said after the race that Daley's speech was a “source of inspiration.” She said seeing Daley with his relatives reinforced the idea that family support helps when a loved one battles cancer.

“With his grandchildren here, that shows a lot,” said Rojo, 39, whose mother is a five-year breast cancer survivor. “We understand their struggles and how family is important. We can relate.”

Relative of activist fatally shot

Chicago Tribune

The great-nephew of a prominent Englewood community activist was fatally shot Sunday in that neighborhood, according to family and police.

Ronald Baskin, 21, of Lansing was leaving his great-grandmother's home after stopping by to wish her a happy Mother's Day when at least two shots were fired in the direction of his vehicle, his great-uncle Hal Baskin said.

Police said the shooting occurred about 4 p.m. on the 6500 block of South Green Street. Ronald Baskin was pronounced dead at the scene.

“This is something that should never be visited on a mother or a grandmother on Mother's Day,” Hal Baskin said. “I don't wish that on nobody.”

Baskin, 60, is a former gang member turned peacemaker and politician who has worked as a community activist for 40 years. A perennial candidate for alderman in Englewood, Baskin is executive director of the PEACE Community Center, an anti-violence group at 6455 S. Peoria Ave.

Syrian opposition to meet on peace talks

1 Syria's opposition coalition will meet in Istanbul on May 23 to decide whether to participate in a U.S. and Russian-sponsored conference to try to end the Syrian civil war, coalition officials said Sunday.

Police end hostage standoff; gunman killed

2 Three children trapped all weekend in a New Jersey bedroom with a gunman and the dead body of their mother were freed early Sunday when police burst through the door and stopped the gunman with a single shot, authorities said. The suspect died of his wound shortly after the siege ended.

Officials investigate quadruple homicide

3 An Indiana man returning to a home he shared with his mother discovered two people dead in his living room and called police, who found two other bodies in the house including the man's mother, officials said on Sunday.

At least 42 killed by car bombs

4 At least 42 people were reported dead Saturday and more than 140 were injured in a pair of bombings in the southern Turkish town of Reyhanli, the latest apparent example of spillover violence from the conflict in nearby Syria.

Scientists: Act now or risk major habitat destruction

7 OSLO The habitats of many common plants and animals will shrink dramatically this century unless governments act quickly to cut rising greenhouse gas emissions, scientists said Sunday after studying 50,000 species around the world.

The scientists from Britain, Australia and Colombia said plants, amphibians and reptiles were most vulnerable as global temperatures rise and rainfall patterns change.

About 57 percent of plants and 34 percent of animal species were likely to lose more than half the area with a climate suited to them by the 2080s if nothing was done to limit emissions from power plants, factories and vehicles, they wrote in the journal Nature Climate Change.

Hardest hit would be species in sub-Saharan Africa, Australia, the Amazon and Central America.

"Climate change will greatly reduce biodiversity, even for many common animals and plants," lead author Rachel Warren of the University of East Anglia in England said. The decline would damage natural services for humans such as water purification and pollination, she said.

But the scientists said governments could reduce the projected habitat loss by 60 percent if global greenhouse gas emissions peaked by 2016 and then fell. A peak by 2030 would cut losses by 40 percent.

19 people shot during Mother's Day parade

9 NEW ORLEANS Nineteen people were injured Sunday when gunfire erupted at a Mother's Day parade in New Orleans, police said. Two young children were among the victims.

Shots rang out at 1:45 p.m. as the second line of the parade passed the 1400 block of Frenchmen Street in the city, New Orleans Police Department spokesman Garry Flot said.

Ten men and seven women were shot along with a 10-year-old girl and 10-year-old boy. The children were grazed and are in good condition, Flot said in a statement.

"Many of the victims were grazed some by bullets that ricocheted," he said.

Two victims are undergoing surgery, according to Flot.

Officers saw three suspects running away, one described as dark-skinned male aged 18 to 22 with short hair, Serpas said. No arrests were made.

BULLS

CONFERENCE SEMIFINALS ★ GAME 4

Carlos Boozer

Not really a superstition as I would call it, but usually I'll take a nap during the day and then get to the arena three hours before the game and get some shots up. That's about it.

DON'T JINX IT!

WHAT THE BULLS CALL 'ROUTINE' OTHERS MIGHT CALL 'SUPERSTITIOUS'

By Bryan Crawford | FOR REDEYE

Whether they like to admit it or not, athletes are a superstitious bunch. Some guys need to take the same route to the arena before every game. Some pitchers don't like to step on the base lines when they leave the mound and head to the dugout. You hear all sorts of crazy things athletes do to keep from jinxing themselves.

Basketball players are no different. Some guys have to wear certain shoes or get dressed the same way every time. Others listen to a certain kind of music or song, and still others like to read.

Even Michael Jordan had superstitions. M.J. had to wear his North Carolina practice shorts underneath his Bulls game shorts, and he ate steak and potatoes before every game.

The current Bulls have their own game-prep habits. However, they don't refer to them as "superstitions" or "rituals." Instead they call it their "routine."

RedEye asked the Bulls if they had any superstitions—er, routines—they adhere to before games, and we got some interesting (and funny) answers.

BULLS VS. MIAMI (HEAT LEAD 2-1)

Taj Gibson

A few of us hang out in the steam room before the game and just all clown around. It's usually the funny guys on the team who do it. We just go in there, get a nice sweat going on, crack jokes and then come out and just play.

Daequan Cook

Not really. I don't do much, just chill. I might watch a little TV sometimes to take my mind off the game, but that's about it.

Rip Hamilton

I always take a shower like right before the game. It helps me to relax.

Kirk Hinrich

Nope.

BRYAN CRAWFORD IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.
@BRYANCRAW4D

Nazr Mohammed

I try to get to the arena around the same time before games. I also like to get in a light lift before I play. I wouldn't necessarily call that a ritual; it's more like a routine you get into to help you get ready to play.

I always text my best friend from college before games and she always texts me back with some goofy emojis about every team. I always text my mom before every game and I always eat Potbelly.

"Hi Dad. [Pauses, looks at TV] ESPN Classic?"

"Yeah. Today's the 10-year anniversary of the classic Four Man Bulls game. Your mother and I watched it with you in the crib."

"But I don't get it—'Four Man Bulls game?'"

"It was this crazy game where we played the Heat with four players. [Laughs.] Game 4 of their second-round series in 2013. They were already missing Derrick Rose, Luol Deng and Kirk Hinrich with injuries."

"[Incredulously] Rose was injured?"

"I know, I know, but his consecutive-games streak started the next season."

"Crazy. Who else was out?"

"Let's see if I remember. Well first of all, Marco Belinelli burned both his hands that morning cooking eggs. He showed up in band-aids that looked like medical oven mitts. And an hour before tipoff, David Stern suspended Nazr Mohammed because of his ejection in Game 3. And then Taj Gibson was ejected in the first quarter for 'glaring.'"

"Glaring?"

"Little-known rule. Carlos Boozer tried to defend him and got tossed too, so they played the first half with Marquis Teague, Nate Robinson, Jimmy Butler, Vladimir Radmanovic and Joakim Noah. Actually led by two at halftime."

"That Thibs was a helluva coach, huh?"

"One of the best. That team had heart, but terrible luck. In the third, LeBron James landed on Nate Robinson after a dunk and crushed him like an accordion. Nate went to the hospital on a 5-foot stretcher. On the next possession, Noah got his ponytail wrapped in the rim while blocking a shot. Ripped out a chunk of his scalp."

"Good god!"

"Uh huh. They opened the fourth with Teague, Butler, Radmanovic, Malcolm Thomas and Daequan Cook."

"Wow. And then?"

"If I remember correctly, Radmanovic slipped and landed on his head. Thibs grabbed a jersey so they wouldn't forfeit and spent the rest of the game barking out instructions while defending Chris Bosh. Not half bad, as I remember."

"[Stunned silence] Amazing. Did they win?"

"Grab a seat. I don't want to ruin it."

1	Ejections. Technical fouls. Near-fights. What is the Bulls-Heat series missing?	Ummmmmm, an MVP sitting on the bench wearing a suit, who's clear to play, but isn't playing.	A WWE Spanish announce table for LeBron James to "flop" onto and destroy.	Referees with eyes.	Three more Bulls wins, obviously.	In order: Chokeslams. Powerbombs. Jim Ross.
2	What have the Blackhawks been doing between playoff rounds?	Thinking about where to take the Stanley Cup after we win it.	Putting lotion on their playoff beards, right? PLEASE TELL ME HOW TO STOP IT FROM ITCHING!	Sending the Canucks heartfelt congratulations on yet another choke job.	Held a "Great Gatsby"-themed party at Johnny Oduya's house.	Hopefully not shaving, right?
3	What's the secret behind Corey Crawford's stellar play?	Wheaties, Jazzercise, Jameson, beer, lighter pads, ketchup—doesn't matter as long as he's GOOD!	"Wax on. Wax off." (Tweet me if you get the movie reference.)	Three shakes a day and a sensible dinner.	He's been working on his killer instinct with Filomena Tobias.	Lots and lots of dedication. And waffles. Waffles help me with everything.
4	How should Tiger Woods and Sergio Garcia solve their differences?	A fistfight. That would bring in Day 3 Ratings.	Last Man Standing at the Met Drinking Match.	Thumb war.	18 holes. Each player hits the other person's balls.	Hell in a Cell? Sorry, I'm on a wrestling kick today.
5	If Phil Jackson takes a job with the Sacramento Kings pot sales will go up in that city. WHAT? Who said that???	... the Zen Master is going to be anything but.	... he'll have a heck of a job trying to get those crazy Maloofs Zen'd out.	... he'll ride the first Buss out of L.A.	... I'm going to throw up. Can we bring back the SuperSonics yet?

The Blackhawks start the next round of their Stanley Cup journey this week in the Western Conference semifinals. In the meantime, you should prepare for the official RedEye Sports Chicago Blackhawks WCSF Drinking Game, or RESCBWCSFDG for somewhat-short.

When buying your booze, please reach for a Wirtz Beverage-distributed brand, so you can help defray Rostislav Olesz's $3 million-plus salary in Rockford. And if you need an excuse to show up hung over at work, cut this article out and show it to your supervisor. It's a valid excuse! Don't drink and drive, and have a good time.

Drink once when ...

penalty kill and gets up like nothing happened

- » Corey Crawford makes an A+ save
- » You think about making a Johnny Oduya pun but resist actually saying it
- » Marian Hossa does that shoulder thing and skates directly through a defenseman
- » TV cameras catch fans on the glass staring at their damn phones instead of looking at the playoff hockey right in front of them and yes this really bothers me

Drink thrice when ...

- » Toews' or Kane's Hart Trophy snub gets mentioned
- » The Blackhawks kill another penalty
- » You actually verbalize that Oduya pun
- » Any TV bumper music used is from the band Thrive ("All That's Left"? Totally plausible, NBC Sports!)

Finish what you've got in hand when ...

- » Eddie Olczyk says "for all you young hockey players out there ..."
- » You get lost in Patrick Sharp's eyes
- » Andrew Shaw's body ends up in the other team's goal

BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE

Bonus round!

- » If either Brandon Saad or Patrick Kane scores, shave a line into your hair just above your ears. Ladies?
- » If the game you're watching goes to a shoot-out—I have bad news. You've had far too much to drink, and today is Nov. 8. Everyone thought you were dead or in Mexico.
- » If the hot girl scores on both goals during Shoot the Puck, do a shot for every inch of her high heels.
- » Whenever the Blackhawks score on a particularly soft goal, yell "Hhhwwwuudderyoodooooing?" and sip a fine California white wine, then steal a glance at yourself in the nearest mirror.
- » If Bryan Bickell scores three goals again in the Donna Lebrano is such a big Blackhawks fan that not even contractions could force her to leave Thursday's game. According to ABC 7, she went into labor during the second period of the Hawks' win over Minnesota—and didn't leave for the hospital until after the game. Fortunately, newborn son Owen Michael is just fine. "No way was I leaving," Lebrano said in a statement from Adventist Hinsdale Hospital. "We are a Hawks family. I had to see the end of the game."

Former Detroit wide receiver Titus Young was arrested Friday in California, his third arrest in less than a week. Young broke into a house in San Clemente, Calif., according to the Orange County Sheriff's Department, and then fled on foot before he was apprehended after a struggle.

“Obviously it's no fun being injured, so you want to get better anyway, besides the fact of playing. I like to be around the team. It's not fun hanging out with the trainers and having to do all that stupid therapy stuff.”

READY TO ROCK

RedEye Rock 'n' Vote 2013 bands get personal before playing our free show at House of Blues

By Matt Pais

REDEYE SOUND BOARD

Though you probably already know, let's review why you should come to RedEye's free Rock 'n' Vote show at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at House of Blues:

- You chose the four local artists from our Rock 'n' Vote Top 10, which we narrowed down from more than 150 submissions. So this show is happening this way because of you!
- Your text votes at the show help determine the champ, who wins a July 14 performance slot at Taste of Chicago.
- Chicago favorites and Lollapalooza alums Maps & Atlases will headline the event.
- Worth repeating: It's free!

RSVP for the show at redeyechicago.com/rock (required for attendance, 17+). In the meantime, get to know UIC/Little Italy pop-rockers The Addies; South Shore rapper DVS Jackson, Esq.; Bucktown's folk/country singer Michele McGuire; and North Center funk/hip-hop ensemble whysowwhite a little better:

What makes your performances special? What has been your most memorable experience on stage and why?

The Addies: Our fans make our shows what they are. The more energy they have, the more we have and vice versa. Our guitarist jumped off stage during a solo, the crowd loved it, but none of us knew it was coming.

Michele McGuire: We try to have as much fun as we can with the crowd. (I often auction off members of the band for a date with the highest bidder.) Last year in Dubuque [Iowa], the cops broke into the venue during our set and carried the owner out in handcuffs for being too drunk. This is a true story.

What should people absolutely not do at your concert?

DVS Jackson, Esq.: If I'm on stage performing, you shouldn't bring your girlfriend with DVS Jackson, Esq.

you. Women love the clowns (so I've heard).
whysowwhite: Resist.

How will you celebrate if you win Rock 'n' Vote?

DVS Jackson, Esq.: Well, I generally like to save my bathing opportunities for special occasions. I think this would qualify.

Michele McGuire: Start a conga line out of the House of Blues and lead everyone to Burke's Webb Pub for celebratory drinks.

Describe your sound in the form of a haiku.

The Addies: Rowdy we may be / Listen with a glass, whiskey / Tap toes to the beat.

DVS Jackson, Esq.: Witness the Fat man /

Who gets his pay in Cheetos / Alas, no one claps...

Michele McGuire: We encourage drinks / We play our little hearts out / But we stay tasteful.

whysowwhite: We like to get down / And we trust that you do too/chicago.funk.love.

How do you think you represent Chicago music?

The Addies: We try our best to portray the Chicago scene through our sound. We're dirty, bluesy, loud, and that's exactly what we set out to be.

DVS Jackson, Esq.: Rather poorly, actually ... but I've been told I score well in the 38-50

“We like to get down / And we trust that you do too/chicago.funk.love.”

—a haiku describing whysowwhite's sound

whysowhite

Michele McGuire

former D&D role-player demographic.

Michele McGuire: We have fun and don't take ourselves too seriously. Also, Steve really likes to HOT DOG it on the drums.

whysowhite: Chicago has such a positive, self-sufficient music scene—everyone is cooperative and supportive of each other in the name of Art. We feel like it's important to share that energy with the rest of the Universe and our music is a manifestation of that message.

To what do you attribute the band's success?

The Addies: The sex appeal of our dapper drummer Kaleb Hite. Oh, and of course the fans.

DVS Jackson, Esq.: Cheese. I think many of us underestimate the importance of cheese in the success of many ventures, musical and otherwise.

What does your band do before every show? What's something you never do?

Michele McGuire: Find out if we have a band tab at the bar. Then we head to the green room where we attempt, and often fail, to be best friends with the other bands. Annoy the sound guy. We try to make things nice and easy.

whysowhite: We make sure to align ourselves on a positive frequency so that we can bring positivity with every note we play. We never start a show from a negative place, no matter what is going on in the outside world.

If you could open for anyone, who would it be and why? Who would you refuse to perform with, and why?

The Addies: The Black Keys. They're awesome. Nickelback, because they're too busy getting "to the bottom of every bottle."

DVS Jackson, Esq.: My dream gig would be opening for Dr. Teeth and the Electric Mayhem. Who would I refuse to open for? Maps and Atlases ... wait ... who's headlining this thing again?

Michele McGuire: Wilco—so we can keep it local and have a kick-ass Chicago show. Phish—Out of fear that their fans would think our opening set was way too short. (But we sure would party with those guys.)

whysowhite: The Roots—they are the best live band in the world and are capable of tak-

“Our fans make our shows what they are. The more energy they have, the more we have and vice versa.”

—The Addies on what makes their performances special ing any party to the next level—and that's the key. We will play any gig, ya heard me?

“Star Trek Into Darkness” opens May 15.

What would most excite and scare you while traveling through space?

The Addies: Well, our guitarist doesn't think we've ever been to the moon (crazy, right?), but I think we'd be most excited for the space food (dehydrated ice cream!). Definitely most scared of the jet-lag from visiting Neptune (orbits the sun every 163 years...)

Michele McGuire: It would be exciting to see interesting things ... it would be scary to crash into said things.

If you were a summer movie hero tasked with saving the planet, what would you do to defeat the villain?

The Addies: Challenge him to a battle of puns for the fate of the world. The Addies are very ADDIEment about quick wit.

DVS Jackson, Esq.: I would force the villain to listen to mainstream radio for a weekend. By the end, he'd be so slack-jawed and malleable he'd be harmless.

whysowhite: Have some tea and hug it out. Hopefully he opens up and we could reconcile our differences.

CONCERT REVIEW

Hayley Williams leads Paramore on Thursday at the Chicago Theatre
CHRIS SWEDA/TRIBUNE

Paramore powers up

By Matt Pais

REDEYE SOUND BOARD

The question prompted by the remarkably underwhelming array of (repeat) Lolla headliners for the upcoming festival is, “Where are all the headliner-caliber rock bands that have never played Lolla and, you know, are actually good?”

At Thursday’s sold-out Chicago Theatre show, Paramore had the answer. Tiny Hayley Williams is leading a giant revolution, shooting sweet darts into the hearts and lungs of fans who belt out every cathartic word.

“Chicago, you’re making us blush up here,” the singer said in response to the extremely enthusiastic crowd.

At times the 24-year-old Williams, whose half-orange, half-pink hair mirrors the band’s aggression underscored by vulnerability, barely needed to sing, and she knew when to let the fans have their moment. During “Now,” a fantastic track from the band’s terrific, chart-topping new album, Williams wailed, “If there’s a future, we want it,” and let the crowd howl, “Now!” If that’s not an anthem for a generation, I don’t know what is.

Expanded to a sextet on stage, the Tennessee trio represents the rare female-fronted rock band whose dynamic presence out front blends perfectly with the equally effective music behind her. Paramore is just flat-out fun.

During the 95-minute set, seamless transitions between albums highlighted the depth and catchiness of the group’s catalog—among many highlights, “Misery Business,” “Looking Up” and “Whoa” were standouts—while sampling intelligently from the new self-titled record, which only gets better on repeat listens. The audience filled in for the gospel choir on “Ain’t It Fun,” while a handful of members selected from the masses happily sang “Ankle-bitters” on stage as Williams encouraged everyone in the venue to dismiss self-consciousness and party in a safe, judgment-free space. In fact, Williams’ voice isn’t extraordinary and she’s exposed in ballads like the just-OK “The Only Exception.”

The show’s energy also dipped on the rare occasion she just stood at the mic and sang, as she did on “Let the Flames Begin.” Otherwise, Paramore played with force and focus, making good use of lights, background video and streamers/confetti falling from the ceiling. Not that they needed it—with material this solid and a fanbase this passionate, the “Looking Up” refrain of “We’re just getting started” still sounds true four years later.

As for the 40-minute opening set by L.A. dance-rockers Kitten, I can’t wait until their writing catches up with their performance. Singer Chloe Chaidez is explosive and even aggressive, her antics ranging from spontaneously sitting on an unwitting security guard’s shoulders to frequently smacking the backing musicians cranking out songs that sometimes sound like the Joy Formidable bowing to the ’80s and losing the hooks during their trip back. ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Taurus April 20-May 20

The sun is making you bold. You'll show off some serious cleavage during the business day or display that great butt in some tight work jeans. Hopefully, somebody will notice.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Mercury in your sign is increasing your considerable charms. You'll find it easy to woo others with your sexy words and sensual wit. You could discover that several people are falling in love with you.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Trust your gut this week. Neptune is enhancing your natural psychic abilities. You might pick up on some flirty vibes that somebody is projecting at you.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A relationship is getting more physical, thanks to Venus. You're becoming addicted to someone, whether you want to or not. If you thought it was just a fling, maybe it's starting to be something more.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Saturn is reminding you that you're no pushover. Don't let your partner stomp all over you. If your boyfriend isn't returning your calls or texts, tell him that this is not acceptable.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Communication will be intense this week, courtesy of Mercury. You'll be talking, emailing and texting just about everybody and his brother. Meanwhile, you're micromanaging a touchy situation with your honey.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

The sparks are flying between you and a certain luscious someone. The moon is increasing that sensual chemistry to unbelievable levels. You won't be able to concentrate on anything.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

A relationship has a bouncy, nauseating feeling. Mercury is creating extra melodrama in your personal life at the worst possible time. Try not to panic; it's probably not fatal.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

With the moon opposite your sign, you're wondering how best to proceed in your relationship. Sometimes the wisest thing is to do nothing. Blow off steam by getting outside and doing things that make you happy.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Mercury is filling you with wanderlust. Schedule a weekend getaway with your honey. Or visit a gorgeous park and have a picnic.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

The moon is making you super sensitive. Don't take it personally if your honey has to cancel your date or your wife says she's going to be late coming home from work. Contrary to popular belief, the world doesn't revolve around you.

Aries March 21-April 19

You're fantasizing about a former flame for no good reason. A sensual moon is reminding you of the good times. But do you really want to reunite with that drunken trucker or that drama queen when you moved on long ago?

'CHICAGO FIRE' FEATURES A SPECIAL CAMEO THIS WEEK: THE STANLEY CUP

Wolf-produced series. An NHL spokeswoman said the trophy's appearance on the episode, which has to do with a fundraiser at Molly's, is a promotion of sorts for the NHL playoffs currently airing on NBC Sports Network.

More than two years after the Blackhawks brought the Stanley Cup to Lott's Pub, the NHL's most prized possession returned to the Bucktown bar for a cameo on the NBC firefighter drama "Chicago Fire."

The episode featuring the Stanley Cup airs Wednesday and was filmed April 12 at Lott's—known as Molly's on the Dick

The stars of the show are no strangers to hockey. Taylor Kinney and Jesse Spencer have attended a handful of Blackhawks games while in Chicago filming the series, including Marian Hossa's 1,000th game in March, and they said their interest in the sport has increased significantly during their time here.

"I think a lot of that has to do with this city," Kinney said while on the set with the famous trophy. "We started going to Blackhawks games when they were on their winning streak. You could feel the electricity in the [United Center]."

Like Kinney, Spencer has taken part in the Shoot the Puck challenge during Blackhawks games. But unlike Kinney, who said he played street hockey growing up, Spencer, an Australian, said he had never played hockey before taking part in the challenge in February.

"That's my new favorite sport," Spencer said by phone April 28. "I didn't get into it until I came here. I'd been to one game before that with Hugh Laurie while we were in Vancouver shooting the pilot for 'House.' I'd never touched a hockey stick in my life before I got to Shoot the Puck."

Kinney and Spencer also have attended Cubs, Bears and Bulls games while in Chicago (Kinney brought his girlfriend, Lady Gaga, to a Chicago Bulls Charities fundraiser at the United Center in January) but, ironically, have yet to attend a Chicago Fire soccer game at Toyota Park.

"No Fire games, oddly enough," Kinney said. "I think they're mentioned in this [Stanley Cup] episode. I'd love to go see a game."

One "Fire" cast member who has attended a Fire game is Eamonn Walker.

"I think Eamonn did the coin toss at a Fire game," Spencer said. "We let the Englishman handle that one."

red hot 'LATE' SHIFT

Seth Meyers

AND NOW, HERE'S YOUR HOST: SETH MEYERS!

The "Saturday Night Live" star (and Northwestern alum) will take the reins of NBC's "Late Night" next year when Jimmy Fallon moves on to "The Tonight Show," the network announced Sunday. "I only have to work for Lorne [Michaels, executive producer] for five more years before I pay him back for the time I totaled his car," Meyers joked in the news release.

'Community' watch

Chicago native Danny Pudi and "Community" fans got a big surprise Friday: The beleaguered NBC sitcom has been renewed for a fifth season. "Wild times and I truly didn't know what to expect. But that's always been our show—we never know what to expect," Pudi wrote in an email to RedEye. "Gotta thank the fans [and] my mom ... for cheering on the Greendale gang."

Rich get richer?

Remember the "Hot Cheetos & Takis" kids? Well, they're back—and this time, they brought two new songs, avclub.com reports. "My Bike," by Y.N. Rich Kids, features "a menacing recorder," while "Khaki Pants," by NSJ Crew but featuring members of Y.N. Rich Kids, "bemoans the burdens of having to wear boring school uniforms while trying to look cool."

Mommy dearest

Motherhood is great and all. It's just those first few moments that are a little unnerving, Shakira told Ellen DeGeneres on Friday. "Don't expect that he is going to be rosy cheeks, cherub when he is born," she joked. "Actually when I saw mine, I was like, 'Oh my God. He is purple and wrinkled. What is this?'"

Kate Upton

“In Miami, boobs are fantastic.”
—Kate Upton, to Vogue, on her experience modeling in Florida

THE DIGIT

$72.5 MILLION

That's how much "Iron Man 3" earned at the domestic box office over the weekend to keep its iron grip on the top spot, Reuters reports. "The Great Gatsby" was second with a haul of $51.1 million.
